O. Thou Whose Image.

BY ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH.

Other selections from this author, his portrait, autograph and biographical sketch, have already been printed in this series.

O thou, whose image in the shrine Of human spirits dwells divine.
Which from that precinct once conveyed,
To be to outer day displayed, Doth vanish, part, and leave behind More blank and void of empty mind, Which wilful fancy seeks in vain With casual shapes to fill again,

O Thou, that in our bosom's shrine O Thou, that in our bosom's surine
Dost dwell, unknown because divine.
I thought to speak, I thought to say,
"The light is here," "Behold the way,"
"The voice was thus," and "Thus the word,"
And "Thus I saw," and "That I heard";
But from the lips that half essayed,
The lemerfact utterance fell numade. The imperfect utterance fell unmade.

O Thou, in that mysterious shrine O Thou, in that mysterious surine Enthroned, as I must say, divine. I will not frame one thought of what Thou mayst either be or not. I will not prate of "thus" and "so," And be profane with "yes" and "no": Enough that in our soul and heart Thou, whatso'er Thou mayest be, art.

Virgilia Pettit, reader; Mr. Frank E. Cosby, planist; Mr. G. A. Thilow, vio-linist.
